The journalist, fully briefed by IPS, informed Brzezinski this week that he was being "quartered" in Labor Committee publications. Top CIA Rockefeller strategist Brzezinski claimed to be "upset to learn" of the Labor Committees' indictment of the Trilateral Commission as the planning body for restructuring the world economy along fascist lines. Loudly protesting his innocence, Brzezinski immediately requested a meeting with the journalist as well as a copy of New Solidarity.

MONDALE'S DETENTE SPEECH DICTATED BY CIA AGENT BRZEZINSKI

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 12 (IPS) -- Yesterday's speech by Senator Walter F. Mondale before a select gathering of Soviet officials at the Institute of United States Studies in Moscow was prompted and mandated by Zbigniew Brzezinski, the Executive Director of David Rockefeller's Trilateral Commission and a leading CIA operative.

A spokesman for Mondale's office here stated that the Senator, who is a member of the Trilateral Commission, spoke "extemporaneously" and that his remarks were "based on substantial background briefings" and "extensive discussions with Mr. Brzezinski." According to the spokesman, these briefings occurred last week, "just before" Mondale left for his week-long trip to the Soviet Union.

Mondale Urges Restraint and Cooperation

According to unreliable U.S. bourgeois press reports, Mondale told his Moscow audience that it would be in the interests of the Soviets to act on a "principle of restraint" during "this gathering world crisis," and that the future of detente and East-West trade agreements is dependent upon Soviet cooperation with "Western" efforts to solve the capitalist crisis. The New York Times reported that Mondale warned the Soviets that they cannot expect to be immune or remain isolated from the "economic tides that sweep the rest of the world."

This line has recently been used by Trilateral-Rockefeller agents to lure the Soviets into cooperating with the Rockefeller fascist restructuring policies. Brzezinski himself has recently promoted Soviet participation in Rockefeller's food control and slave-labor "energy development" program--provided the Soviets agree to the break-up of the Soviet Bloc.

The first significant call for such Soviet participation in its own destruction was an article, attributed to the pen of Senator Mondale but probably written by Zbigniew Brzezinski, in the October issue of Foreign Affairs, organ of David Rockefeller's Council on Foreign Relations. Entitled "Beyond Detente," the article called on the Soviets to move "beyond" mere "detente rhetoric," toward a more "substantive" form of cooperation along the lines outlined for them by Rockefeller. Since the publication of "Beyond Detente," Mondale has been thrust forward as a leading spokesman on U.S.-Soviet relations, a role obviously assigned to him by his "Professor" Brzezinski. The Soviets have stupidly embraced Mondale as the "progressive, lesser evil" to hardliners like Senator Henry Jackson.

Announcing their continuing vulnerability to such psychological warfare, the Soviet Union said today that it is willing to provide Soviet oil to Rockefeller's U.S. oil companies in exchange for their more advanced technology and the U.S. extending "Most Favored Nation" status and credit to the Soviets. The Soviet press agency Tass reported today that the Soviets are prepared to cooperate on a large scale with the oil companies and have been engaged in discussions with Rockefeller's Standard Oil of Indiana and Arabian-American Oil Company. Tass attributed these statements of Soviet intentions to Soviet Oil Minister Valentin Shashin during a meeting with Senator Mondale in Moscow.
