

opportunities not only for the EAP, but for those abroad who are not indifferent to the fate of Germany. The statesmanlike intervention of French President François Mitterrand in the Bundestag on the occasion of the 20th anniversary of the German-French Friendship Treaty on Jan. 12 is an example. This applies not only to Mitterrand's opposition to suicidal versions of "arms control" sponsored by the NATO bureaucracy, the State Department, and Moscow, but also to his courageous words on the necessity of a New World Economic Order, which would make the Third World and Europe true industrial partners.

Interview: Ehud Olmert

Israeli legislator: 'Anti-Semitic reborn in Greens' outlook'

In a statement for attribution made to EIR Middle East correspondent Mark Burdman on Feb. 14, Israeli Member of Parliament Ehud Olmert denounced recent propaganda issued by the Green Party ("die Grünen") of West Germany as containing "positions and views which are traditionally anti-Semitic." Olmert labelled these views "dangerous," and warned that they could have an adverse effect on the future of German-Israeli relations "if they indicate a new wave of anti-Semitism within Germany."

Olmert is an influential member of Israel's ruling Likud Party. In Israel's parliament, or Knesset, he holds an important post on the Foreign Relations and Defense Committee. He has also won a reputation for being one of Israel's most persistent opponents of organized crime, both in Israel and abroad.

Speaking by telephone from his Knesset office in Jerusalem, Olmert made the following statement:

"I read with apprehension that the Green Party included in its official publication and material positions and views which are traditionally anti-Semitic.

"We are aware of the fact, very much to our dismay, that this party is very much anti-Israel with regard to the Middle East problem. This in itself is not illegitimate, but when this is joined by an anti-Semite approach, it becomes dangerous and must be addressed.

"Those of us in Israel who are in favor of improving relations with Germany are particularly sensitive to anything which comes from Germany that is tainted by anti-Semitism. We hope that this party will not indicate a new wave of anti-Semitism within Germany that may set back the relations between the two nations."

Olmert indicated that he had read about the greens' anti-Semitic propaganda in Israel's newspapers Feb. 14, particularly the mass-circulation Hebrew-language daily Ha'aretz, which carried a prominent news item dispatched by Bonn correspondent Daniel Dagan on the theme that the greens are the "new anti-Semites of Germany."

Dagan's dispatch was based on analysis of a new "greenie calendar" which is getting wide circulation in Germany. The calendar contains many irrationalist elements which have characteristic anti-Semitic components.

Prior to Olmert's declaration, several Israeli military spokesmen, intelligence officials, and media experts had privately told EIR that they regarded the greens as "fascists" and as "reminiscent of the precursors to the Nazis in the late 1920s and early 1930s."

Olmert's statement echoes in crucial respects evidence published by the European Labor Party, in a widely circulated Summer 1982 document entitled "Stopp die Grüne Gefahr" ("Stop the Green Peril"), that the Green Party's ideology and belief-structure was in most basic points identical to the irrationalist ideologies that produced the Nazis and other fascist movements of the interwar years. This document, written under the direction of European Labor Party chairwoman Helga Zepp-LaRouche, presented the extensive evidence of the Green Party links to leaders of Germany's neo-Nazi parties.

Since that document was published, Executive Intelligence Review has been at the forefront in exposing the greens' links, financial and otherwise, with Libyan dictator Muammar Qaddafi, who declared in a January 1983 interview with French and American journals that he thought "Hitler was right" in fighting against a "Zionist subversive plot" against Germany in the 1930s. Several top Green Party representatives have informed EIR investigators that they cherish their links with Qaddafi, who provides a key financial base for their activities.

EIR has established that the "green movement" operates as a sub-unit of the "Neo-Nazi International," run out of Lausanne, Switzerland, by Swiss Nazi Party banker François Genoud and by Scottish Rite Freemasonic oligarchs in Malmö, Sweden. Genoud is, along with Qaddafi, the main bankroller of former Algerian President Ahmed Ben Bella, who has been secretly preparing translations of Adolf Hitler's works into Arabic for prospective 50th-anniversary celebrations of Hitler's rise to power in the Arab-Islamic world. Ben Bella, whose house was recently raided by French police, maintains extensive contacts to the "greens."

EIR is preparing explosive new feature material for international circulation during coming weeks on the greenie Nazi-Qaddafi connections. EIR's founding editor Lyndon H. LaRouche has indicated that the truth behind the "Lausanne Connection" controlling the Green Party will reveal many of the truths of the past 200 years of history that have until now been tightly covered up.
