From the Managing Editor

“Give us this day our daily bread.” At a conference in Chicago in December 1988 of the recently founded “Food for Peace” movement, Lyndon LaRouche posed the question, “Who will answer this prayer?” As Marcia Merry Baker and the three other speakers whose presentations to the June 29 Schiller Institute conference we publish in this issue (Conference Report) make clear, that prayer, despite the efforts of the worldwide LaRouche movement and many others, has gone unanswered. And, in fact, the global food situation has only hideously worsened since then. As all four speakers emphasized, only the full reinstatement of Glass-Steagall, and great, Earth-transforming projects like NAWAPA, have the power to reverse this murderous trend.

LaRouche took up this issue as well, in his July 12 webcast (National), declaring, “We do not have enough food being produced for human beings to avoid a major crisis.” The terminal condition of the world’s bankrupt monetary system requires the revival of Glass-Steagall—immediately! A flurry of activity in Congress—see “New Glass-Steagall Bill Stirs Debate”—indicates that we are on the edge of a breakthrough.

Other indications of a paradigm shift taking place around the world: The overthrow of the Muslim Brotherhood’s President Morsi in Egypt is confirmed to be a move against Anglo-Saudi machinations in Syria. See “British Permanent War Plans for Mideast Run Into Trouble” (International). Even the British Lords (and Commons) are in revolt against the Queen’s drive to spark a Hundred Years War in the Mideast: “U.K. Parliamentarians Challenge Queen’s Perpetual War Policy.” Helga Zepp-LaRouche takes on Germany’s Chancellor Merkel, who is all but defending the global spy net cast across the globe by the NSA. If anything, Zepp-LaRouche notes, this is worse than the East German Stasi. And Lawrence Freeman supplies an eyewitness account of his visit to Mali, where all the preconditions exist for an economic breakout: “Impoverished Mali Can Become a Breadbasket for the Sahel.”

A recent op-ed in the New York Times provided Lyndon LaRouche with the opportunity to contrast the “nightmare-world which is still resonating in the spirit of the Andrew Jackson myth in some parts of our nation, today,” with the nation-saving presidencies of Abraham Lincoln and Franklin Roosevelt (Feature).
