

LAROCHE ADDRESSES BERLIN SEMINAR

U.S. Must Lead the Way to New World Monetary System

by Jonathan Tennenbaum

On June 28-29, representatives of 15 nations gathered in Berlin to discuss, with Lyndon LaRouche, a strategy for revolutionary change in the strategic, economic, financial, and moral-cultural conditions on our planet. Thanks to the May 23 defeat, by bipartisan forces in the U.S. Senate, of an attempted White House coup against the U.S. Constitution, and the prospect of near-term removal of President Bush and Vice President Cheney from office, the possibility of a positive revolution in world affairs has come within reaching distance. On the table are LaRouche's policies for preventing an uncontrolled collapse of the dollar, creating a new world monetary system, and launching the greatest physical-economic expansion in history.

The Berlin EIR seminar, second in a projected series that began in Berlin on Jan. 12-13 of this year, included participants from Russia, China, India, Egypt, Israel, Hungary, Croatia, Slovakia, Czech Republic, Poland, Italy, France, Germany, Switzerland, and the United States. This EIR package begins with LaRouche's opening statement, which set the tone for the discussion; it is followed by an account of highlights of the seminar itself, some important excerpts from LaRouche's exchanges, and his final statement, Inspired and provoked by LaRouche's opening remarks, an extraordinary one-and-a-half-day dialogue ensued between the American economist and statesman, and the representatives of the various nations, notably including a number of senior figures having extensive experience in international diplomacy and the affairs of government.

Given the fact, acknowledged repeatedly during the proceedings, that the world is now, in a sense, moving in uncharted territory, the discussions in and around the seminar had an exploratory and, in part, confidential character. What clearly emerged, however, were the outlines of a potential new global constellation of forces, centering around the prospect of a fundamental change in the United States, and the personal role of Lyndon LaRouche in the process of bringing about that change.

EIRNS/Wolfgang Lillge

At EIR's Berlin seminar on June 28, Lyndon LaRouche (left) with Hon. Mario Lettieri of Italy, an organizer in the Italian Parliament for a New Bretton Woods. The meeting saw the emergence of a potential new global constellation of forces to bring about a new, just world monetary and economic system.