

Why are They FAKING Photos from Maui?

by Miles Mathis

First published August 11, 2023

What's wrong with that photo under title, of this event which allegedly happened on. . . August 8?† What kind of wildfire turns everything white and nothing black? What kind of wildfire burns buildings but not trees? And how did the wildfire move in? The forested area stops more than a mile away from town, and Lahaina is surround on all sides by open fields, with little or no brush. [Except on the ocean side, of course. Maybe the fire moved in from the ocean?] You can see that in the photo above, where the field is brown, indicating dirt. Dirt doesn't burn. The park is untouched as well, so what was the vector for the fire? [Those images and the ones below have now been removed by the government. FEMA has now stopped release of any new images and videos, and both FEMA and police—with cooperation of Google—are removing old ones. In addition, a wall has now been built around Lahaina, to prevent anyone from seeing what is going on in there. All this confirms my analysis here.]

Here is a pull-out on the same before/after pic, which proves it:

Stories have now been planted about “invasive alien grassland species” that supposed fed these fires. But that again is just more words. There is no evidence of it here and these photos do not confirm it. Are we supposed to believe the darker brown inside the road in the second pic is the fire vector, burning this grass but just turning it from light brown to medium brown? I'll tell you a little secret: when you burn dry grass it doesn't turn medium brown, it turns black. The dark brown northeast of the town might be dark enough to be burned grass, but I still don't see the vector in from the east. That picture by itself would indicate the fire was set right there, and then failed for some reason to move north or east. We are told the fires had been threatening for days, so there was plenty of time for hotshot teams to secure the town, removing or blocking any remaining possible fire vectors into the town. So this makes absolutely no sense.

If you still don't believe me, test yourself on this one:

Doesn't match the gray one, does it? And why is it so small? The largest we find on the web is 474x266, hardly bigger than a thumbnail. So why no larger resolution? Because then the seams would show. You could spot the fake. That huge house should never have burned, since they could have hit it with a water cannon from the bay, with no danger to firefighters. The water is literally right there. Same for the other big estates right on the water. No reason for them to burn, unless they were let burn. I don't think they were. I think they are still there.

That tree is the famous Banyan tree, and they are now admitting it didn't burn. There is video here. They say it is smoldering, but the only thing smoldering is a log they appear to have brought in to create smoke. Another clue this is all being staged.

This reminds us Lahaina is the former capital of the Kingdom of Hawaii, with a palace built there by Kamehameha III, making the current event even more uncanny. Kiwahine, goddess of Maui, lives/lived in a pond there. Kamehameha and Kiwahine would not have lived there if Lahaina got no run-off from the mountain.

Same with that one, only available in that same small size, which aids in fooling you. Nothing but pixels, so you can't tell if it is photoshopped or not.

That one is a bit larger, but it still looks fake to me. No resolution and it just sort of looks licked by computers all over. It makes no sense, either, since wildfires wouldn't move through paved areas with such complete devastation. All the houses would have to be doused with kerosene first. I have never heard of a wildfire burning right down to the ocean in an unforested area.

Same thing there, with the small size and no larger resolution available. Aiding the fake. Everything turned white, nothing burned black. All the trees along the highway to your left survived, though the fire allegedly came in from that direction. All the trees in the town itself are untouched, with houses allegedly turned to powder all around them.

And remember this: Hawaii is only five hours from California, so teams could have flown in from there. California's huge firefighting contingent is relatively quiet this summer, with nothing like the number of fires of 2020-2022. What I have missed is any pictures or film of firefighting teams, helicopters, or planes fighting this fire in Maui. This is the first thing that comes up on a search:

You have to be kidding me! Is that a garden hose? They have interviewed a shopowner from Lahaina, but unfortunately he tells us no firetrucks responded. What? No sirens? No planes dumping water or chemicals? No ships with water cannons? No military response? No national guard response? Just a total thumb-in-ass stand-down?

Saturday: they are now admitting no warning sirens sounded, much less firetruck sirens. Nothing. But that isn't suspicious, is it? Also that the other usual emergency alerts, like to phones, TV and radio stations, also did not get released. Nothing. Also that the fire hydrants had no water. But that's not suspicious, is it? That isn't proof of foreknowledge.

They are now saying that hospitals were already swamped before this event, making the response difficult and requiring airlifts to Oahu, but as with Covid that has been blown out of the water by researchers on the ground. They visited the hospitals and found almost no one there. That has now been confirmed by local media, which surprisingly has already contradicted Gov. Sylvia Luke's claim on CNN that hospitals on Maui were overwhelmed with burn victims and victims of smoke inhalation. Top health officials on the ground there including Hilton Raethel and Wade Ebersole have admitted hospital admissions have been minimal. Luke's office refused to comment on that. What was she going to say? "Whoops, we forgot to pay those guys off!" So you have to ask yourself why the governor would tell such a huge lie on CNN. Must be part of a psyop, right? Or maybe it is just physically impossible for anyone to go on CNN and tell the truth. The current architecture of the universe will not allow it.

They are also lying to us about the hurricane Dora, saying it created hurricane force winds that drove the wildfires. [The official windspeed at Lahaina has now been reported: 81 mph. Aces and eights. Chai.] Except for one thing: Dora missed Hawaii by hundreds of miles and wasn't a strong hurricane when it passed Hawaii on that worst day. It is just now cat. 3, two days later. In video on the ground from that day we see flags and business awnings, and they obviously aren't in hurricane winds. That bozo above fighting the fire with a garden hose isn't in hurricane winds either. We see winds in some videos, but nothing hurricane level. And since Dora passed to the south of Hawaii, coming from the west, the winds should have been blowing the other direction. Obviously, the fire couldn't come in from the east on a wind blowing northeast.

They are also misdirecting by telling us that coast of Maui only gets 15 inches a year of rain. Sounds very dry, right? But that isn't how it works on these little islands. The average rain on the Kukui peninsula of Maui is almost 100 inches, running from 390 inches on the peak to around 20 on the western coast. But that 20 is just direct precipitation: it doesn't include water that runs down to that area from the mountain. That mountain can't soak up 400 inches a year, so most of it runs off, moving down the sides of the steep mountain to the sea. That is where Lahaina gets most of its rain. Maui is one of the wettest places on earth, both on the top of Kukui and in the Big Bog on the border of Haleakala National Park on the main part of Maui, which gets 404 inches a year.

But surely people on the ground would know if this was some sort of project? It has to get out. But the truth about Japan has never gotten out to the mainstream in 78 years. They did the same basic thing there: staged it on a island and controlled all information out. We only know what the governments of the world want us to know. Even the locals in Maui would be pretty easy to fool. They admit they evacuated everyone from that Kukui peninsula, so none of the locals saw this. [NBC Los Angeles reported more than 11,000 already evacuated by Wednesday.] They are getting their information just like you are.* You will say they have to be allowed back in to get any of their stuff that survived, but my guess is they won't. They will be told nothing survived and the government will insure most of those who weren't insured. Only a few government agents will be allowed back in, to do their interviews and make their reports and continue the conjob. Unlike in Ohio, Biden has already signed off on disaster relief (that was fast!) and federal funds “will be pouring in soon”, according to mainstream media. My guess is that peninsula will be blocked off for the “rebuild”, with no road in and a no-fly zone over.** Some of the federal funds will go to those displaced by this fake, but most won't.

Plus, they can continue to control information out since Maui is spook central to start with. It is absolutely stiff with Phoenician Navy, since most of them are rich people and many are famous. Many have media or military connections, so I trust nothing they say about anything. If this is a project, most of them would be in on it.

This means the death numbers also make no sense. Right now they are at 80, so we are supposed to believe 80 people refused to evacuate this little town and then couldn't be saved by the ocean or the Coast Guard, which was sitting on the docks or just offshore? Do you believe that? Again, the water was right there! The beach was right there! Water doesn't burn, last time I checked. You wade into shallow water and it is done. Or are we supposed to believe they were all taken by sharks?

But why did they pull this? I don't yet know. The US owns all of Hawaii and the US Military owns most of it, so maybe they had some reason to take this back from the tourists. Maybe they are going to turn it into another secret base. Or maybe a Rothschild or Rockefeller decided he wanted it, so he just took it. It would be interesting to know who owned the largest estates there, which we can see in these photos. My best guess is one of those families decided to take the whole Kukui peninsula and ran this fake to do it. He may take the rest of Maui next, with a fake radiation scare or something. He will probably receive federal funds to help him with his transition and new security. Your taxes at work.

You will say some rich guy can't own an entire Hawaiian Island. Then I guess you didn't know: Larry Ellison of Oracle already owns 98% of Lanai and has property on Maui as well. Lanai is just off the west coast of Maui and is almost exactly the same size as the Kukui peninsula. Ellison bought the entire island in 2012 for $300 million. Which means the whole island isn't worth as much as his Four Seasons hotel there, which is worth double that by itself. He spent $450 million just on updates and expansions. It is a five-diamond resort with three golf courses.

In fact, Lahaina is the closest point of Maui to Lanai. They are just across the bay. It is about eight miles from Lahaina to the coast of Lanai, and Keomoku Village there. Ellison's resort is on the southern point of Lanai.

Mark Zuckerberg owns thousands of acres on Kauai, and of course he gives us more military and media connections.

Also suspicious is that as of Friday, Jeff Bezos' fiancée said that couple is establishing a $100 million fund to rebuild. Wow, that was fast! Bezos already owns much land on Maui. He had previously pledged to spend $10 billion to fight climate change—and the event in Lahaina is being used to promote. . . climate change. Like Ellison and Zuckerberg, Bezos has huge military connections.

My guess is there will be a round two to this current fire project, to prevent a reopening of that peninsula. They will claim the wildfire has contaminated the ground water, so there is no water available. That will buy them time to come up with some other story to close it down permanently. They will claim the whole Kukui peninsula is derelict and Ellison or someone will buy it in a (literal) firesale.

Wednesday: [it is already happening, just as I predicted. They have hired this bozo to claim the water pipes are contaminated with petroleum, which can't be filtered. But we know he is lying, since no one is “back in Lahaina” trying to drink from the taps. No one is being allowed into Lahaina except the spooks.]

I have been told this must be a directed energy weapon, or DEW; but no, until further notice my default assumption is this is CGI. It is possible they burned some of the lesser buildings there the rich people didn't want or need, but in my opinion there is almost no chance the entire town was flattened like this. Wildfires don't work like that, burning right down to the ocean, even hitting the docks. Remember, there is almost always a breeze coming in from the ocean, which would push any incoming fires back. So the films we are seeing are either CGI or they are staged somewhere else or they are filming very limited areas. Edited in the right way and backed up by these fake before/after images from above and some fake interviews, they can make it appear the whole town is gone. But for myself, I wouldn't believe it was until I saw it with my own eyes.

I had just about finished this paper when I tripped across something big. It may not be a Rockefeller or Rothschild, or even Larry Ellison. It may be. . . Oprah. She already owns thousands of acres on Maui and has been adding to her total a lot in the past decade. This Newsweek article of August 10 admits she owns more than 2,000 acres, and the video there shows the wildfires just happen to originate on or very near her farms in Kula, on the northwestern slopes of Haleakala:

Kula is the agricultural area inside the dotted lines. In June it was reported she was looking to purchase the 3,600-acre Hana Ranch adjacent to her properties, which would bring her total to near 6,000 acres, already a large percentage of Maui's livable land area. We aren't told if she owned property in Lahaina. Newsweek almost seems to be blowing her cover with this story, since their title is

Map Shows Oprah's Maui Properties as Hawaii Wildfire Spreads.

They then show the wildfires spreading right out from her properties. Very weird. Are they spilling the beans or misdirecting us?

So is it Ellison or Bezos or Winfrey or the US military? Or all of them together? We will keep our eyes and ears open. But for now it is worth remembering Ellison (and the other guys) has big military contacts, making a large portion of his billions from military contracts. That would give him the connections to fake these photos and videos, as well as the reach in the media to sell this worldwide. And of course Oprah has those media contacts as well.

As I predicted, they are now letting in a few actors and agents to continue to sell this farce. Despite the fact that many sources are reporting no one is being let in. That link includes a quote of Msgr. Terrence Watanabe, pastor of St. Anthony's, saying "They're still not allowing people to drive into Lahaina". In that same article, we discover the main church in Lahaina was miraculously spared the fires. The photoshop guys were apparently instructed to leave it alone for some reason. Some rich guy wants it for some reason.

I tripped across this photo at the Weather Channel. Not staged at all. That is supposed to be a woman walking through her former home. In a bathing suit and flipflops, smiling. That's what you would do right, if you were going to tour through such "utter devastation"? You would wear flips. And a bandeau top for the cameras. But they need your eyes on her, so you don't notice this looks nothing like a house that just burned down. Again, everything burned white, nothing black. That steel was already black, so it doesn't count. Half the shit in your house is drenched in flame retarders, but here everything burns down to white powder. The other half in most houses is plastic, so we should see big congealed puddles for that. But nothing. It reminds us of the photos from Dresden, of the firebombing there.

Remember those? Apparently the guys in Langley think fires cause everything to turn to flour, and they are still under that impression. They also think fires cause mummification, so I guess we have that to look forward to in Maui.

There's another guy who allegedly thought it was a good idea to tour the town wearing flips, on an effing bicycle. Notice that he is walking with his hands in his pockets. But where is he walking? Is he going to stroll right through that burned car? He is literally one step away from it and doesn't even appear to see it. He is staring into the distance like a zombie.

You'd think some of these people might try to drive out of town, but no, they decided to park on the sidewalks and remain indoors, since Wheel of Fortune was on.

If you haven't figured it out, that is a paste-up/CGI. Definitely. The shadows blow it, as usual. The car shadows are moving directly to their right, straight across the street and are wider than the cars. The mountain is to the left, so this is shot from the north. Which means this is in the morning. Problem is, the shadows of the guy and his bike are moving in a slant toward us, not directly to the right like the cars. The guy's shadow isn't in line with the shadow of the car behind him. Busted. For another tell, look at the curb on the far side of the street. It is casting a shadow that is too short.

Plus, what kind of cars are these people driving in Lahaina? Does Lahaina have a ghetto where blond white boys in flips live? Those cars were all low-dollar junkers before they were burned. I would have thought rents were high in Lahaina, but I guess not. Hawaii is actually sort of like Detroit, it seems.

But we have more. I could work on that one photo all day: it is that bad. How about those palm trees behind the collapsed building? Apparently the fires were hot enough to melt steel, but not hot enough to burn wood. We have been through this with 911, remember? House fires or wildfires in cities can't burn hot enough to weaken steel, so we should not see it bending like that, under very little weight. That looks like tornado damage. And if you tell me it is hurricane winds plus fire, why did the hurricane winds leave the fronds on the trees? Those trees don't even look scorched. They look green, with the narrow leaves intact. Obviously they were pasted in, probably along with the mountain. In which case we have no proof this is Lahaina. More like tornado damage in Mississippi or somewhere, which reminds us that in this photo full of cars, we can see not one license plate to prove this is Hawaii. I guess fires attack license plates first. I also like how on the nearest car, the fire burned the metal door handles right off.

Also interesting that the streets and sidewalks are so free of garbage and leaves and soot and ash. I guess the hurricane winds swept all that out to sea.

Next day: Infowars is now in on the scam, trying to sell the fires as DEW. They are running this questionnaire in the sidebar,

WHAT CAUSED THE MAUI FIRES?

1. Wind and faulty infrastructure
2. Climate Change
3. Direct Energy Weapon
4. Lightning/Volcano

Almost 60% of their readers chose DEWs. Judy Wood fans, I guess. But as usual, the correct answer is not on their list.

5. There were no fires, it is all another CGI/Hollywood fiction. A movie sold as real.

Infowars is actually calling the DEWs Chinese Space Lasers, as if they had anything to do with this. As if we in the US don't have enough to worry about from our own mad trillionaires, and we need to bring the Chinese or Russians into it.

I guess you could say it doesn't really matter in the final analysis whether it was wildfire, DEW, or fake, the end being the same: the island will be stolen by the very rich for their own purposes, military or otherwise. They will either re-purpose it as a Smart City, a five-diamond hideout for the trillionaires, or a secret military op below the dormant volcano Kukai. Remember, the US military is strangely and inordinately interested in dormant volcanos for some reason, as we have seen recently in other papers. Especially those on islands. So we should not ignore that important angle here.

Another possibly important angle is that Maui is a famous god of the Pacific islands, who was very much like Prometheus, since he gave fire to man. How this ties in here is not presently known, but it is clear that it does.

More clues coming in today, Monday, as they are telling us only 2 of the 96 bodies found so far can be identified. That's sort of strange, right, since they are also telling us many of them were incinerated in those cars we keep seeing. So why can't they identify them from their cars? License plates and VIN numbers burned right off I guess, even though the letters are raised on license plates to prevent that, you know. Their teeth were burned right out as well, I guess, preventing use of dental records. So they have to go straight to DNA. Hmmm. But here is something I am being told by locals there: the Natives like to torch old cars that are abandoned or worthless, or just unattended. It is a famous local game, so Maui already had a contingent of burned out old cars available. Just a coincidence, I'm sure.

We are told up to a thousand people are unaccounted for. Really? Tourists, maybe? Did they check on the mainland? It looks like they are going to ramp the death toll way up, to make this look real and create more fear, but that will just make the event even stupider. For I repeat what I said above: these people were just a block or two from the ocean. Why would they sit in their cars and watch the flames engulf them? How about get out of the stinking car and run down to the ocean? Oh yeah, they are telling us the ocean was on fire. Metal boats sitting in the water were burning, as so often happens. SO THERE WAS NO ESCAPE!

Watch: Extensive devastation left by Maui wildfires

Can you make sense of that photo, for instance? All those people were allegedly incinerated in their cars, not a block or two from the ocean, but SIX FEET from the ocean! And you know what, a DEW doesn't explain it, either. Why not? Because if Lahaina had been destroyed by a DEW, thousands of people would have been incinerated in their homes and businesses. The deaths wouldn't be 100 or even a thousand, they would be 10,000, with most in their homes. All the tourists there would also be dead. Instead we are being told a few hundred may have been incinerated in cars. That makes no sense, because if this was a DEW it didn't just target cars. Most houses and businesses were also turned to white dust. Do you think everyone felt the DEW coming, so they got in their cars? No, again, we go to curtain number three: that film is CGI. I remind you that CGI specializes in exactly this kind of overhead panning of a scene, with little or no motion within it. This was developed for Hollywood, which uses it extensively. They have programs now that turn a normal scene into a disaster scene, almost at the touch of a button.

And you know what, I can prove that film is CGI. I simply went in and studied it closely. Check out this screenshot from a few seconds later:

That's the same car pasted in twice. The computer just rotated it and scaled it. It has the same damage on the rear side panel and rear fender, note especially the black dot. In other stills we can see both cars also have the same rusted top, which has gone to red. Strange, since neither fires nor DEWs would cause rust. That requires water, as you probably know.

That is the same film rendered from behind. You can see the two matching red-topped cars. Also note the yellow x's on the license plates. What's up with that? That means these cars are derelict and were just fed into the computers without bothering to edit that out. Busted.

So not only is this CGI, it is very sloppy. Someone needs to instruct these computers to create more distance between copies, since you have to be asleep not to spot this.

Many of these photos are credited to a Javier Cantellops, who just happens to be an "ex" Airborne Ranger, Special Ops. Oho! So, in case you missed that, Cantell OPS in Special OPS. Cantellops still basically works for Army, as the director of a company called DARKHORSE Specials Ops Integration, which deploys veterans to disaster areas. Why? I guess now you know. But none of that is suspicious or confirms my theories to a T, does it? His real name appear to be Javier Santos, from Florida, and he is related to Radican, indicating he is part Jewish. The Radicans/Ratigans are Hungarian Jews, think gold medal gymnast Andreea Raducan. He is also related to Roig: remember the teacher Kristen Roig in Sandy Hook who allegedly hid with students in a bathroom? A bathroom where she said there was a bookshelf? Any relation to Rafael Roig on Javier's lists? Well, let's see. Strangely, this Rafael Roig that Cantellops is related to seems to have many last names/aliases: Roig, Lorenzo, Soto, Muriente. How many last names do you have? These people are also related to Campbells, never a good sign in cases like this.

I didn't immediately find a link to Kristen Roig from Javier's end, so I searched on Kristen Roig of Connecticut. Guess what, the computer has never heard of her. No Kristen Roig comes up. I did however find a Kristen Roig at LinkedIN, now a director of fleet management in Maryland. Hmmm. We saw fleet management in Sandy Hook, didn't we, with all the fake cars in the parking lot. And bingo, this Kristen Roig is related to a Jose Roig of . . . Florida. So we have the Hispanic first name and Florida together, telling us we may be on the right track. Jose is related to Ramon, but I didn't find a Rafael. Still, my gut tells me there is some Intel link here.

Correction August 19: I did a Bing search on Roig of Sandy Hook, and the first thing that came up mis-identified her as Kristen. A reader pointed out her name is Kaitlin, not Kristen. Instantcheckmate does have a listing for her, age 39, now living in Westport. She is now Kaitlin Roig-Debellis, having married Nick Debellis. Curiously, this 28-year-old grade school teacher started a new non-profit within a year of the event, that “focuses on compassion for young children”. Because no one naturally has compassion for young children, right? We need a non-profit to remind us to do that. That non-profit, Classes4Classes is still around, with Roig as the executive director. She still has a LinkedIn page, but it is generic, not mentioning the non-profit. It claims she is still working for the Newtown Board of Education. The Chair of Classes4Classes is Alix Purcell Morrow of New York City, who is, according to her [LinkedIn profile, a “writer of fiction and screenplays. Hmmm. You don't say? A writer of fiction being involved in the play-out of Sandy Hook? Morrow was in Insurance until the year before Sandy Hook, at which point she became the marketing head of Child Mind Institute, a spooky non-profit started at that time. If we go to the About page on their website, we find zero useful info, just the usual platitudes. No information about who started this, where, or with what money. So that timing is extremely suspect. I think we have found the organization and person that handled the story at Sandy Hook. Just before Sandy Hook, she also became director of marketing at ChangeCreateTransform, “the premiere platform for access to the world’s thought leaders, for innovation, problem solving and idea generation.” So this just keeps getting better. You should also check out the list of directors at Classes4Classes, which consists of a bunch of spooky psychologists and therapists, whose local businesses no doubt bloomed after Sandy Hook. As for the Child Mind Institute, they are led by Devon Briger, also CEO at The Acceleration Project, where we find she came out of Microsoft and Kraft, as well as Columbia University. That figures. This Institute was co-founded by Debra Perelman and Brooke Garber Neidich. Perelman is the CEO of Revlon and Neidich is a trustee of the Whitney Museum and the Lincoln Center. Her father was Sidney Garber, of the famous Chicago jewelry stores. So, the usual rich Jewish ladies. But why do we find these people when we dig beneath the surface at Sandy Hook? I can see why we find the therapists, but why the head of Revlon? Well, she wasn't the CEO in 2012. She was a Senior VP at MacAndrews and Forbes, the Revlon-owned holding company that also includes SIGA, the big pharma company involved in fake vaccines. They work closely with the DoD. So maybe this had to do with marketing one of their drugs. More likely it was just part of the general destabilization campaign run by these folks against the Gentiles. Debra's father Ronald Perelman, now 80, is one of the richest men in the country, invested in literally everything.

For one possible link here, we find him on the board of the Weill Cornell Medical Center, part of New York Presbyterian. So we find the drug link again. Everything is now about drugs, as you know. This merits more investigation, but I don't want it to take over this paper on Maui.]

More digging links Cantellops to Josef Lobe of Groveland, NY, died 2016, related to the Lobes of that area, linking us to Meyers. Again, Jewish. So Lobe is probably a variant of Löb, Loeb.

And here's another big clue. In late 2021 a new police chief was installed in Maui. He is John Pelletier, and do you want to guess where he was previously? Las Vegas, where he was the incident commander during that fake shooting in 2017. Just another whacky coincidence, I'm sure. He has already been caught in multiple contradictions. And he just happens to be a recent graduate of the FBI Academy, getting a certificate in criminal justice there in 2019. Hmmm.

August 22: [This planted agent has now claimed he is also the coroner for the event. Police chief and coroner. I guess he is also the ambulance driver, undertaker, and caterer for all funerals.]

Also getting caught looking like a total fraud is Hawaii Governor Josh Green, MD. Jewish of course. You can see him in this ridiculous report from CBS now on Youtube, wearing scrubs and a stethoscope on the streets.

You have to laugh at how Hollywood this is.

Also this: in a recent Oprah interview, she says, “You are going to see a lot of Phoenix stories, rising from the ashes here.” Oivay. So she just admitted who pulled this: the Phoenicians, as usual, and Maui is now theirs to do with as they wish. It will belong to the billionaires only, and everyone else will be moved out. They won't even need maids, since that will be done by AI.

Tuesday: Mayor Bissen has now admitted that West Maui is a media-free zone. They have actually created an unconstitutional 12-mile cone of silence surrounding Lahaina. Proving this is an op.

Someone asked me if this is CGI, why don't they just burn the trees as well? Why make this look like a DEW when it isn't? They can create a burned tree in CGI very easily, or just burn it completely to ash. Some would answer that it is part of the fear creation, but it isn't even that. The real reason is. . . because they wanted to keep the trees. The trees are like the church and few other buildings that mysteriously weren't burned in the fake films and photos. The Phoenicians wanted to keep them, so they will still be there in 2024. Some people in the future will see them. So they couldn't burn down all the local trees in CGI and then claim in 2024 these huge trees just magically grew back. You can't rebuild a big old tree with supplies from Home Depot. But you can rebuild buildings like those in Lahaina pretty easily. So if you see a building in 2024 that was supposed to be burned down, they can tell you they rebuilt it exactly like it was. Same thing they did in Dresden and other European cities, except in this case it will be more believable. The architecture is very simple in Lahaina, while in Dresden they were claiming to recreate master-carved stone and so on. Very unbelievable, as I showed.

Wednesday: I continue to be sent links to videos by readers, and this one pointed out to me that many of these cars have no engines. That video is beneath Stew Peters at Twitter saying he was wrong: it wasn't DEW it was “Forrest fires”. Fires set by Forrest Gump, I guess. What a tool. The DEWheads will say the lack of an engine is proof of DEWs, but they never explain how this tech targets engine metal and leaves other metal alone. It melts the engine right out of the chassis, but leaves the chassis? Plus, they forgot to CGI in some silver melted lines of metal pouring out of most of these cars, showing us how the metal was melted out, running in rivers. I guess DEWs now aerosol engine metals, or turn them to flour. But you don't need DEWs to explain why these cars don't have engines: they don't have engines because the engines were sold by the junkyards before these wrecks were fed into the computer or hauled to some set. Lazy compositing.

August 25: There is now a famous video making the rounds, alleged to be cellphone footage taken by Lahaina residents trying to get out of town. The lead segment is by Noah Tompkinson, and he even shows us ID in the video. But the video still looked staged and CGI'ed to me, so I did a people search on Noah Tompkinson of Lahaina, or just of Hawaii. Guess what?

Unfortunately, we were unable to find any results for "Noah Tompkinson" in our background check database

- Try expanding your search to include all states
- Double check your spelling
- Try using their maiden name
- Make sure you are using the person's legal name, not a nickname (e.g. Cathryn, not Cathy)
- Has this person recently moved from another state? Try searching their previous location as well

Also no Noah Tomkinson. Strangely, in the video we get both spellings. It says Tompkinson upper left, then says Tomkinson on his diploma and school ID. The school isn't in Maui, it on Oahu. Does Maui have a highschool? Yep, a big one, with over 2000 students. But there is another problem: you can see the picture on the ID, and there is no match. It isn't the guy talking. He ends up getting in the water, just like I said they should, so that is strange. They appear to be making videos to answer me. But we are supposed to believe he continued to film himself in the water, with a mask on. I really don't think anyone would be filming themselves in that situation.

Then we see video by Annalise Johnson, who is listed for Lahaina. She is 46. But her video is surprisingly professional, not being a handheld cell. There is some sort of stabilizer on it. Her husband is Lansworth Johnson, an orthopedic surgeon in Jackson, WY, so these people are money. Not the sort to be trusted in Lahaina right now, as we have seen.

The next segment is from Bethany Price, and there is no one by that name listed for Lahaina. The closest is a lady from Kihei named Linda W. Faust, 52, who the computer thinks is the same person as Bethany Price. She is aka Linda B. Price. She is also listed as a Wetherbee. The computer thinks she currently lives in Rockford, MI.

The next segment is Carrie Kintz, and she is married to Bradley Kintz, also of Kailua, Oahu, which happens to be right next door to Air Force Station Bellows. Are you seeing a pattern?

August 28: The downed power lines as cause of fire has now bitten the dust. Maui County sued Hawaii Electric immediately, and HE has already filed documents proving the lines were decharged when the big afternoon fire allegedly started. They had been decharged since a small early morning fire had been put out by Lahaina Fire Department. The video you have seen of live downed lines is from 6:30am, about eight hours before the main event.

Plus, notice they are now admitting the communications blackout started even before the event. Again: all power had been out since early morning. Possibly this is what caused the lack of alerts. If back-up batteries were dead, a loss of electricity would make all warning systems inoperable. Communication through TV or most radio would also be gone, and even cell towers may have been dead. This would make it much easier to pull an operation of any kind, since people would have to believe what they were told by authorities. If everyone was evacuated, no one would see what really happened in Lahaina, or if ANYTHING DID. OR IF NOTHING DID. They would be relying on the same controlled information releases you are. They would be relying on the same faked CGI footage you are.

When I first posted this theory, my friend said, “No, it couldn't work, they would have to do a,b,c...x,y,z, and there is no way they could get away with it!” I answered, “They are going to do all those things. They will completely restrict access and control all information out. Residents will be told the place is a total loss and won't be let back in. Drones and all other flyovers will be banned. We will be told the water supply is tainted. They will build a wall. The coast guard will keep all ships too far away for photos (except the fake ones). It will be like those Hollywood movies where the government comes in and quarantines the whole place, like in Super8.” And guess what, they have.

*They are just now beginning to report stories of people jumping into the bay and being rescued by Coast Guard, but those stories sound made up. They sound like they are filling another hole in the script. I have watched some interviews with people, but they all look staged.

**There is only one road circling the peninsula, and two entry points, so it will be very easy to restrict all access.
†A reader reminds me the other two deadliest fires in US history happened on October 8, also aces and eights since October means eighth month. That would be the Great Chicago Fire and the Peshtigo Fire. Indicating those too may have been faked or managed.
